

POTTS' LAGOON Holly Arntzen/Georgina Arntzen/Tom Arntzen ©2016

Potts' Lagoon is located in the Broughton Archipelago off the coast of British Columbia, a marine wilderness area that abounds with ocean life. It is named after Barney Potts, who homesteaded there in the early 1900's. This song is inspired by the sights and sounds of rowing a boat with creaking leather oarlocks in the gently falling rain, while eagles dive for salmon, dolphins play and swim in front of the bow of a sailboat and breaching humpback whales spout and dive. An orgy of ocean life abundance... dance to the rhythm of the creaking oarlocks!

Dance to the rhythm of the creaking oarlocks
Rippling ocean
Dripping raindrops
Dance to the rhythm of the creaking oarlocks
All the way up Potts' Lagoon.

Thrill to the sight of fishing eagles
Diving kingfishers
Jumping fish
Thrill to the sight of fishing eagles
All the way up Potts' Lagoon

Then there are the dolphins
Swimming around us while we sail
Steaming breath rises
In Blackfish Sound from the humpback whales

INSTRUMENTAL BREAK

Then there are the dolphins
Swimming around us while we sail
Steaming breath rises
In Blackfish Sound from the humpback whales

Dance to the rhythm of the creaking oarlocks
Rippling ocean
Dripping raindrops
Dance to the rhythm of the creaking oarlocks
All the way up Potts' Lagoon.